Gregg's Good News

A man is currently in ICU due to an apparent drug overdose. That event happens all too often across the United States. For the most part, as sad as it is, it would prompt minimal recognition from the media.

But this case is different. The man in ICU is Lamar Odom. ESPN commentator Scott Van Pelt invited watchers to acknowledge his distinguished 14-season NBA career, his titles with the Los Angeles Lakers and his 2011 Sixth Man of the Year Award.

Van Pelt criticized people who remembered Odom primarily as a reality TV star from a stint on "Keeping Up With The Kardashians." (Do you know anyone who watches that show?)

The point being made was that Lamar Odom was a celebrity worthy of his acclaim rather than a celebrity whose acclaim was based on no significant achievement.

My thinking goes in a different direction: Why are Americans at a place that intrigue with celebrities, essentially to the point of worship, is so prevalent? Are we at a better place with higher interest in seeing celebrities than silent citizens who serve?

I remember a Bible study with a young woman who was considering becoming a Christian. She took a giant step towards Jesus as she realized he often reminded people not to tell about the wonderful miracle he had just performed.

Jesus could have been an instant celebrity. He chose to be a servant. Is it time for a new reality show? "Keeping Up With The Christians." The circle of people around you are already watching.

A discipling group focused on ability to pray and feed yourself from Scripture will continue tonight at 5:00 pm at the church building. Come prepared to share your work on I Peter 4: 7-11.

Have you ever wondered where God is leading you? Our college students are exploring together how we see, choose, and walk through the doors God puts before us.

This weekend is our Fall Retreat, a time for the college students to get out of town and enjoy quality time with God and each other. This year, we are talking about "All The Places To Go". Very rarely in the Bible does God command someone to "Stay". He opens a door and invites us to walk through it into the unknown. Pray for our students to see the doors God is opening and boldly walk through them.
