Family Newsletter

Donald Trump is the 45th president of the United States. Since the announcement late Tuesday night, there have been marches, riots, fear, and anger. Many hateful words have been spread on Facebook and social media. What can Christians do in response? One immediate way is to learn to be a peacemaker this Friday and Saturday (18-19). We will begin with dinner at 6pm on Friday and breakfast at 8:00 am on Saturday. Invite your friends and neighbors to join you in becoming peacemakers.

A second thing we can do is pray. 'Awesome God, we know that you are in control. We trust that you are at work in our country and government. God, we pray that you will give Donald Trump wisdom to lead well. We pray that you will give him the heart to lead compassionately. We pray that people can be united and that we have the boldness to be peacemakers in our community. That we trust you enough to pray with and for others. God, may you be glorified in us as we share your love to all who are struggling with anger and fear at this time'.

Gregg's Good News

Last Sunday, I invited people who were assembled to write a prayer. We had considered Daniel's prayer of confession as he implored God for a good future for the people of Israel. So I invited us to write a prayer voicing confession of sin in our nation and calling on God to be leading powerfully on election day and into our future.

Then, I read several of your prayers and spread all the pages of prayer out before God on the communion table. For me, it was a strong reminder of who rules.

When I walked into the church building on Wednesday morning, after the Tuesday election, I looked and saw the stack of prayers still there on the table. I found my heart smiling. I was reminded that no matter what human leaders do in government, our powerful Lord God still sits on His throne. And he will do what he will do.

Some of you were cheered by the outcome of the election and others were disappointed. No matter which of those feelings you were left with, remember that we prayed together. And we will serve God together. No matter what tomorrow holds, God will hold us in his arms and rule His world.

(If you want to read some of those prayers, you will find them in the foyer.)

Thank you to Josh Stutzman for preaching on this "Orphan Sunday." Josh is a man who lives to honor God. His sermon this morning will call all to reflect the heart of God who cares for widows, orphans and foreigners.

Pam and I are at a retreat for "Ministers and Wives." I expect to be back in the office on Thursday.

Singers: Look forward to our next rehearsal for Sing-A-Long music next Sunday at 5:00 pm. Given that tonight is the Park Place gathering and that various people have other time commitments, there will not be a rehearsal this evening.

PM PREVIEW TONIGHT: 5:45 pm Singing at Park Place

Our Sister, Gail McCaughan, posted this on FaceBook on Wednesday, the day after the Presidential election. Although she intended it as an observation for those of us who frequent "social media," the thoughts are equally applicable to our daily speech and the comments we make to each other and those still outside the body of Christ. Do we truly believe that God IS in control? Are we COMMITTED to our citizenship in the Kingdom of Heaven and to the absolute power and authority of our KING? Do people see and hear that commitment in our speech and actions? Think seriously about it. "Brothers and sisters in Christ, please be careful what you post today. I have seen some really hurtful and even hateful posts today regarding the election. Your friends are reading those posts and may be thinking 'I thought they were a Christian.' I know some of you are very disappointed in the outcome and others are happy and others are just glad it's over because they didn't want either candidate. The same people were on the other side the last two elections. It will always be that way. Some will like the outcome and others will not. Yesterday so many were posting that "God is in control" and then today saying some really hateful things. Do you still believe God is in control? I'm reminded of the children's song, "Oh be careful little mouth what you say for the Father up above is looking down in love." I'm sure he is disappointed in those that are saying such cruel things and posting them on Facebook for everyone to see. May God bless you all, our new president elect, and America."
