Gregg's Good News

At a point in the past I heard a quote attributed to Bill Gates. (I tried to connect the quote with his name and actually didn't find it on the www. So ignore who said the quote.) The gist of it was that it is very efficient to be sick while on vacation. Apparently, the point was that if you are going to be sick—it's really convenient to have that happen while you're already scheduled to be away from the desk.

Well, I had scheduled some time away from Corvallis at the coast for the latter half of last week. But I started getting sick before those days and got a lot sicker after leaving town. I guess it was efficient to be sick at a time when I already had substitutes in place for Sunday. But if I had my preference, I'd really rather just avoid the whole sick thing altogether.

What's the point of all that? Well, I'm still in the process of getting health back and feeling normal. So keep praying for me and stand back if I start to sneeze. You don't want to be sick on vacation or any other time.

Starting on Jan. 22, a sermon series titled, "Considering the Claims of Christianity." This should be a great time to invite a friend you are discussing Christian matters with. Topics will include things like: Arguments for God Outside of Scripture, Why Is the Bible Believable? Evidence for Jesus Outside the Bible, A Biblical Portrait of Jesus . . . and various questions frequently posed about God.

Sunday, January 22 is our Ministry Fair. Leaders will once again set up the tri-folds and be available to discuss the aims and service opportunities associated with each ministry.

Have you ever wondered why the Sanhedrin wanted Jesus dead? Why were they so violently against a simple carpenter? In our CITE class on Matthew we looked at the history that led up to Jesus' life. In 586BC the temple was destroyed and the Jews were exiled. The prophets during that time were proclaiming that it was because they hadn't followed the Law of Moses or the Torah. When the Jews were allowed to return by Cyrus, they focused on following Torah and the traditions as a way to love God and connect to His blessings. The people were so focused on doing Torah so that they could show God how much they loved Him and be blessed that they missed the love of God in Jesus Christ when he was standing right in front of them. This makes me pause and wonder sometimes, am I missing Jesus in my desire to do good things or rest or anything else in life? It's a good reflection point that can realign my heart with God's heart.

This is some of what we are learning in CITE this term. It will be a great study of Matthew. You can still audit the class and learn with our other 8 students if you are interested. Class meets on Thursday from 5:15-8pm at UCC. If you can't make this term, consider taking the ACTS class in the Spring Term which begins the first week of April.
