Thomas' Takeaways

The Value of Good Questions

How many times have you been asked this morning, "How are you?" No, really, how many times? Now, how many times have you answered some of "Great...fine...good...how are you?" and then gotten the same response? Probably at least a few. Is there anything wrong with this interaction? No, but let's be honest - in our society today "How are you?" has become a nicety, not an actual question. It's become a greeting, not an inquiry. From personal experience, it's a question that most people don't expect a real answer to. Now realize, for many people in gathered situations, that's the extent of their interaction with most people. Including church.

The blunt question is do you care about how the person next to you is doing, or are you simply greeting them? If you thought that was blunt: many people aren't sure of that answer, from either side. "Do I have time to have a real conversation before assembly starts?" "Does anyone really have time to listen to my stresses from this week...whoops, Bible class is starting." You may not think about it in exactly that way, but the sentiment may be there.

People are desperate for authentic relationships and communities, and desperate for people who really care about them. Philippians 2:3-4 tells us to count the others as more important than ourselves. We know this, but do we act like it? I would wonder the affect of simply changing how we greet people, and instead of just greeting them, letting them know and inviting them to truly share how they are, whatever comes out. Are we willing to bear each others' burdens, to pray with one another in the foyer, and to allow true relationships to form, even if it means we're late to Bible Class?

A special thanks to everyone who helped with UCC Work Day this past Sunday. We had at least 24 people who made a sacrifice and chose to do labor on the day before Labor Day- thank you for your sacrifice. The place is looking sharp and ready for students.

Also, I was very moved at Nathaniel Franklund's baptism. Nathaniel, welcome to the family, Brother! We are so glad you chose to devote your life to Jesus Christ and follow him. There will be moments of joy to come, but also moments of hardship. When those challenges come, remember the day you were baptized. It can give you strength and confidence to endure.

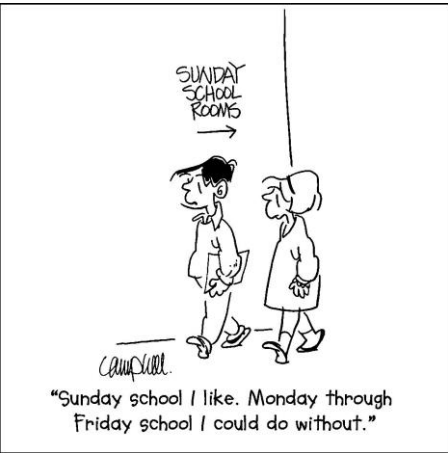

Also, it was wonderful to see Mark Johnson baptize Nathaniel. I've worshipped regularly at 12 different churches throughout all my travels, and this is the first time I have seen someone baptized by an Elder who is not a blood relative. Usually people are baptized by parents, Ministers or missionaries; this makes sense, since usually Bible studies lead to baptisms. However, it made perfect sense to have Mark to the baptizing, as he taught the teen Bible class so often and has been a part of Nathaniel's life throughout his childhood. This is a testimony to Mark's pastoral heart, and shows that we have Elders who truly care for us and shepherd us well.
