Thomas' Takeaways

Goal Setting

I recently began listening to a podcast called “Lead to Win” from Michael Hyatt and his daughter, Megan. This quote from episode 6, “You Can Design Your Year”, stuck out to me and made me think “What if we did this with ministry, churches and our Christian lives?” Enjoy and be blessed, grace to you.

Michael Hyatt: “So you have to begin with the end in mind. What outcome do you want? Give yourself permission to dream. There’s something about the educational process that kind of is geared toward shutting down our dreams. When you ask a kid who’s 4 or 5 years old, “What do you want to be when you grow up?” they might answer, “An astronaut.” If that kid still says “an astronaut” when he’s 14 or 15, as a parent you’re saying, “You know, you might be wanting to think about a real job.” We’re dialing that dream down, making it manageable.

The best way to dream, from my perspective, is to metaphorically stand in the future and take a look around. What do you see? We do this as a practical matter in our company when we’re trying to describe projects we want to delegate to people. We really focus on that end result and standing in the future and describing what we see, but think of it this way. At the end of 2018, how do you want to feel? Sometimes our emotions tell us a lot more than a visual representation of what we see.

How do we want to feel? How do you want your loved ones to feel at the end of 2018? What do you want to see happening in your business? What does your body look like? Is it different than it is now? Is it bigger, smaller? Probably taller or shorter is not something we have a lot of control over, but what could you fix? What do you want to have achieved? The more specific, the more concrete you can make that, the more vivid you can make it, the more compelling and powerful it’s going to be as you begin the process of designing your future.”

Grace to you.

The phrase “self love” gets thrown around a lot today. What does that phrase mean to you? I’ve heard this in a number of contexts: 1) From yoga teachers (take time to come to my yoga class and pay me each week), 2) From foodies (buy my organic food and you will have a healthier life), 3) from artists/podcasters (take time for your passion projects—also keep listening to my podcast), 4) and from travel guides (travel in Europe, enjoy “good living,” and keep watching my travel show).

I’m being a little cheeky ☺, but don’t get me wrong, I’ve dabbled in all of these things. They are all fun, positive, and improve our lives. Everybody should take time for health/hobbies. However, what does the Bible define as self love?

He who gets [a]wisdom loves his own soul;

He who keeps understanding will find good (Proverbs 19:8-9 NASB).

Biblical self love means acquiring wisdom, rejecting wickedness, growing in righteousness, justice, equity and reverence for the LORD (Proverbs 1). This kind of self love will transform the world and give us all a deeply fulfilling “good life.” One way you can do that is by attending our zoom Bible class on Ecclesiastes. Bill, Rolland and Mark are doing an awesome job teaching a mysterious, neglected and often avoided book of wisdom literature. It’s changing my life for the better. Here’s the link:
