In Titus, Paul instructs the older women to teach the younger women how to live so that no one will malign the Word of God. In fact, the second chapter talks about several Christian relationships, and every section is concluded with a form of that thought: that no one will malign the Word of God. Fellowship is part of our walk with God, and we need to encourage the Christians around us to meet together regularly.

Here are some ways you can help: 1) Pray for UCC. Pray students would become believers, lifelong disciples and disciple makers. We don't want to be a tourist agency; we want to be a Jesus movement. 2) Volunteer to cook a UCC dinner. The list is almost full, but there are still a few spots. Sign up in the back by the church calendar. 3) Take students out to lunch. It's good for them to get to know someone other than me. If you click, take them out once a month. There are lots of other ways you can help UCC based on your personal gifts, but these are some things most people can do to help.
